

Roundtable on Language Pedagogy: Theory, Practice, Technology

Wednesday, September 23, 2009, 1:00-4:00 p.m.

3025 Brown Hall
Western Michigan University, Kalamazoo, MI 49008

The roundtable primarily gives the foreign language faculty, graduate assistants, and those who are interested in foreign language studies opportunities to discuss effective practices in foreign language pedagogy. ATIS (Academic Technologies and Instructional Services) representatives also participate in the roundtable, to provide hints of how to use technologies for foreign language pedagogy and course development more effectively.

We have initially a few presenters to talk about issues on gender, pedagogy, foreign language teaching and learning, and move to more free, informal discussions.

Presenters & Participants:

Visiting Scholars of the Society for Gender Studies in Japanese (Tokyo, Japan)

Vivan Steemers, Assistant Professor of French, Foreign Languages, WMU

Andrea Beach, Director of Faculty Development, WMU

ATIS (Academic Technologies and Instructional Services) Representatives

Others

The principal centers for this roundtable is located in the Japanese program of the Department of Foreign Languages. The Roundtable is funded by the Instructional Development Grant, College of Arts and Sciences.

Please direct any questions about the event to Rika Saito, the symposium organizer, at 269-387-3020 / rika.saito@wmich.edu